Location

Ludbreg is a small town situated in the North-western part of Croatia, in the Gornja Podravina region, at the very doorstep to Hrvatsko Zagorje. Because of its favourable geographic position, Ludbreg brings the best of both regions to its inhabitants and its visitors.

The town is located "half way" between larger city centres Varazdin and Koprivnica, at an altitude of 157 meters, beneath the tame hills of the Kalnik mountain, ornamented with vineyards and wine cottages that present a lively scenery for walks and recreation, and provide people of Ludbreg with the well known sparkling wine.

Flying field

This is aerial view of the flying field area in the the opposite view (from north to south).

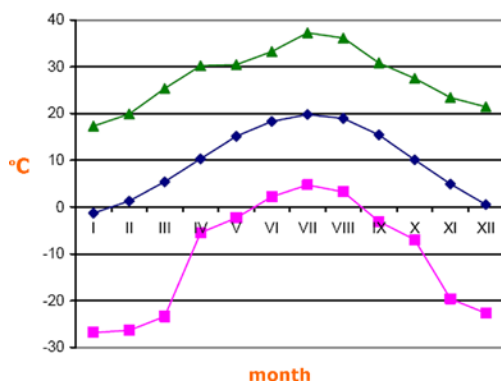

There is no hindrance on the field and in the surroundings, what offers good control of the flight.

Flying field is 5 minutes away from city centre, and 5 minutes away from camping area. Being practically in city centre, flying field is 500 meters long and 150 meters wide.

Weather conditions

The North-east of Croatia (where Ludbreg is located) has continental climate. Average temperature in Croatia is from 22-35 °C during summer, which is very suitable for model flying. Wind is low to moderate, mostly from the North-east direction. The weather during summer is mostly sunny with a few clouds.

However, we cannot predict or guarantee perfect weather conditions during the competition. Global climate conditions affect us too, se we could only hope that the weather will be just good enough and warm enough with enough wind and thermals to make competition interesting. Our hope is based on average statistic for the same period in the earlier years.
